Kansas tries to go over the top for short yardage, but finds little room.

Doug DuBose (22) has clear sailing around the Jayhawk end.

Jeff Smith (28) struggles for an extra yard or two.

Lynn Williams is dragged down by the Husker defense.

A Look Back...

Defensive Headliner

There's a new dimension to Nebraska's offense and to some long-time observers, it reminds them of Jerry Tagge, Nebraska's All-American quarterback in 1971.

The new weapon is the running of junior Travis Turner, a 6-2, 210-pound quarterback who scored Nebraska's first two touchdowns in the 41-7 win over Kansas.

His 17-yard touchdown pass to tight end Brian Hiemer in the second quarter gave Turner another dimension and earned him Huskies Illustrated's Offensive Player of the Game honor.

Nebraska is now 5-0 with Turner starting and his running is becoming an increasing threat to opposing defensive coordinators.

Against Kansas, he carried seven times for 56 yards. He also completed 6 of 12 passes for 91 yards as the Huskers clinched at least a share of the Big Eight championship.

Turner's reckless abandon running is turning on more than the fans. It's turning on his teammates and coaches.

"He's not flashy, but he's a competitor," NU assistant offensive line Coach Milt Tenopir said. "Travis won't lay down and slide to the ground. He's lights-out on every play, and that's important in our offense. He leads this football team."

Offensive guard Harry Grimminger also gave Turner a pat on the back after the Kansas game.

"You know Travis isn't going to go sideline to sideline," Grimminger said. "He's a very physical quarterback, and he can get upfield."

Turner's first touchdown was a one-yard quarterback sneak with 9:18 remaining in the first quarter. His second was a 12-yard run on an option play 4 1/2 minutes later.

The offensive line did such a good job blocking on the play, "there was nothing to it," Turner said. "I just cut back and before I knew it, I was in the end zone."

The touchdown was Turner's 10th this season, one short of the school record for quarterbacks set by Turner Gill a year ago.

Turner admitted the only record that counts now is Nebraska going 7-0 in the Big Eight.

"We know what's ahead," he said. "We don't have time to look at this game and say how good we are. It's us and Oklahoma. We'll try to win it on the field. That's the way we want it."

One thing is certain, OU's defense cannot load up on Turner, thinking all he can do is run.

His pass to Hiemer came on a fake counter sweep bootleg option. Turner's first option is to run on the play. His second is to hit Hiemer.

Like Tagge used to do, Travis Turner took the most expedient route.

Marc Munford

Offensive Headliner

Last week, Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said he thought sophomore linebacker Marc Munford had played well enough this season to merit strong consideration for All-Big Eight honors.

Last Saturday, Munford did nothing but embellish his reputation. The 6-2, 225-pound weakside backer from Heritage High School in Littleton, Colo., led the Huskers with eight tackles, four solos and four assists.

But more than that, he delivered his first fumble recovery of the season to turn the Nebraska-Kansas game into a definite mismatch before it was even eight minutes old.

For his performance, Munford is honored as Huskies Illustrated's Defensive Player of the Game.

Although it's a singular honor, it covers a season-long contribution.

Osborne said he though Munford deserved consideration for Big Eight Newcomer of the Year.

He leads the Huskers in tackles with 80, 20 more than senior linebacker Mark Daum, his closest challenger on the tackle chart.

Forty-seven of Munford's tackles have been solo stops. He also has 33 assists, five tackles resulting in 11 yards in losses, two interceptions and three passes broken up.

Munford's quickness and overall aggressiveness are key factors in Nebraska's dramatic defensive turnaround this season.

Two weeks ago, Iowa State gained just 16 yards rushing against the Black Shirts. Last weekend, Kansas managed only 24 yards rushing.

The two weeks before that, Colorado gained only 53 yards on the ground and Kansas State 53, giving the last four Husker foes a grand total of 146 yards rushing.

"The one thing I thought we did really good was shut down the running game," Nebraska Defensive Coordinator Charlie McBride said.

And Munford was a principal factor in that shutdown.

"Twice, I saw them (the Jayhawks) just tackle Marc Munford," offered NU sophomore defensive tackle Danny Noonan. "Marc's so quick, the only way they could stop him from making the tackle was to tackle him."

The Jayhawks couldn't tackle Munford when they were receiving the kickoff, though.

And when KU's Robert Mimbs fumbled Scott Livingston's first-quarter

Scouting Around...

The Series....

During the past 15 years this has been one of the most competitive series in college football, with the winner of this late-season contest going on to win national championships four times since 1970.

Nebraska won back-to-back national titles in 1970 and 1971 after narrow wins over the Sooners (28-21 and 35-31), while OU used 28-14 and 35-10 victories in 1974 and 1975 as a springboard for two straight.

Overall, the Sooners lead the series by a margin of 34 wins, 27 losses and three ties. But the Huskers have won the last three, including wins the last two times in Norman.

The two teams first met in 1912, with NU winning by a 13-9 margin. They did not square off again until 1919, when they fought to a 7-7 tie. Nebraska won again in 1921, 1922 and 1923 before OU finally broke the ice in 1924 (14-7). The Huskers in fact lost only three of the first 22 encounters from that 1912 inaugural through 1942.

Last year in Norman the Huskers prevailed 28-21 as they stopped Oklahoma with a brilliant goaline stand. The Huskers piled up 424 yards in total offense, with OU just four yards behind.

The last time in Lincoln it was a 28-24 NU win which saw the winners nurse that final margin through the entire fourth quarter. In fact, the last time that the Sooners have scored in the final 15 minutes against Nebraska was in 1980 at Lincoln when Buster Rhymes — then a freshman — completed a miracle rally that led Oklahoma to a 21-17 victory and into its last Orange Bowl appearance.

The Opponent....

Since suffering a 28-11 upset loss at Kansas when they played without starting quarterback Danny Bradley, the Sooners have played in 1970's form.

Oklahoma was riding high (ranked No. 2 nationally) after outplaying and tying then top-ranked Texas, 15-15, before barely stumbling past Iowa State, 12-10. The following week, with Bradley sidelined by ankle and finger injuries, OU was derailed by Kansas.

But the Sooners bounced back with a big win over Missouri (49-7) and followed that with a 42-17 conquest at Colorado last Saturday. Bradley ran the offense in both those league wins, upping Oklahoma's league mark to 4-1 and overall record to 7-1-1. Coach Barry Switzer's club will finish its season Nov. 24 at home against Oklahoma State.

After two seasons away from the wishbone offense, OU has returned to the triple option this fall. And Bradley has been the key.

While falling far short of the soaring offensive figures of the 1970s, the Sooners have been more versatile on offense. Bradley has improved from a 42 percent passer a year ago to a 50 percent flinger this fall, suffering only two interceptions while throwing for seven touchdowns. His running on the option and scrambling under pressure have also been keys to Sooner success.

Spencer Tillman and Earl Johnson, who kept OU in the game at Norman last year, have hardly been factors this season. Johnson, who suffered a fractured kneecap against the Huskers in 1983, has not played much at all, carrying only 33 times for 80 yards. Tillman, who did not make his first appearance on the season until the Texas game, has rushed for less than four yards per carry and has been plagued by fumbles.

The only other big offensive threat of a consistent nature to back Bradley up has been senior halfback Steve Sewell, who has averaged more than six yards per carry in leading the team in rushing and has also caught 18 passes for an average of nearly 20 yards per grab. He hauled in a 68-yard scoring toss at Colorado last week. Freshman fullback Lydell Carr rushed for 143 yards last week at Boulder and has averaged nearly 5 yards per try.

Derrick Shepard and Buster Rhymes split duty at split end, and both are capable of going the distance any time they touch the football. Tight end Keith Jackson has given OU a receiving threat there that it has not had for several years.

The consistent strength of this Oklahoma team, however, has been its defense. For most of the season it's been OU and Nebraska ranked No. 1 in the nation in total defense. The Sooners held Colorado to a minus-three yards rushing last week. They've given up only two touchdowns rushing all season.

The primary ringleaders of that defense have been junior nose guard Tony Casillas and redshirt freshman linebacker Brian Bosworth. All-American Kevin Murphy, injured on the first play of the Pittsburgh game last September, has not played since. It is still up in the air as to whether or not the senior defensive end will return to action this season or come back in 1985.

Injuries have haunted OU all season on defense. In addition to Murphy, the Sooners have lost starters Andre Johnson and Keith Stanberry in the secondary and Jeff Tupper at tackle. Richard Reed, who has filled in for Tupper, injured an ankle at Colorado and is doubtful for this Saturday.

Kicking has not been a strong point on this OU team. Punter Mike Winchester started off strong, but his average has slipped below 40 yards. Placement man Tim Lashar has hit on eight of 11 field goal tries, but has been inconsistent from more than 40 yards out in his career.

The Coaches' Evaluation

yards. "At times, we were a little sporadic on offense, and on defense we had trouble getting to the passer."

"I thought we might be able to intercept some passes. But even though they moved the ball through the air, they didn't score much," said Osborne.

The victory was Nebraska's sixth in a row, all in the Big Eight, and ensured the Cornhuskers a share of the conference title. "We're obviously pleased to have earned at least a tie for the conference championship," Osborne said.

"As far as I'm concerned, this was the most important game all year because of what it represented."

The Cornhuskers have now won 27 consecutive Big Eight games. Only Oklahoma stands between them and a fourth straight perfect conference season. "That would be quite a feat, probably more so than winning the national championship," said Osborne.

"I'm sure the game with Oklahoma, Saturday, will be a tremendous ball game. Oklahoma has an awfully good defense. At times, they've played well on offense and at times, they haven't."

"We'll be sorely tested on Saturday. It should be a great game to watch."

Nebraska clinched at least a share of a fourth consecutive Big Eight championship by taking control early against a Kansas team which had won its last two games.

The Cornhuskers scored on their first three possessions, taking the opening kickoff and marching 81 yards, into a stiff wind, for a touchdown.

"The first quarter was the key," said Nebraska head Coach Tom Osborne. "By taking the ball into the wind on that first drive and scoring on our next two possessions, we kept their crowd from getting into the game and we dampened their enthusiasm."

"From then on, we played well."

"We were pleased to get by this one. Kansas had played awfully well the last two or three weeks."

Nebraska rolled up 476 yards of total offense and limited Kansas to 24 yards rushing. But the Jayhawks passed for 22

A look ahead...

Nebraska vs. Oklahoma

THE WAY THEY SEE IT

Dick Janda, KOLN/KGIN-TV, Lincoln-Grand Island: "Oklahoma always peaks about this time of the year. This year, Nebraska is doing the same. Oklahoma will have to beat Nebraska and Oklahoma State to go to the Orange Bowl."

"Oklahoma State would have to beat Iowa State and Oklahoma and have Oklahoma beat Nebraska. All Nebraska has to do is beat Oklahoma. Let's just say Nebraska is headed again to the Orange Bowl."

John Martinez, North Platte Telegraph: "Huskers will make it four in a row over the Sooners. Besides, all the Latins are picking Nebraska to win, including me. Nebraska 24, Oklahoma 17."

Larry Moehlenbrink, KFOR, Lincoln: "I think Nebraska is playing better than it has all year. Early, I thought Oklahoma could possibly be the best team in the country. But the Sooners have had a lot of unfortunate injuries and lost players for other reasons. Now, Nebraska's just too powerful. Nebraska 28, Oklahoma 20."

Kent Pavelka, KFAB, Omaha: "I've been impressed with Oklahoma all year long. I had serious doubts about the Sooners after Iowa State and Kansas. But they've rebounded and I think they undoubtedly will be the best team Nebraska will face this season. I think it's going to be a classic head-knocker. It'll be close, but I'll be surprised if it'll be high-scoring. If there's any justice in the world, Nebraska will win the next two football games and a national championship. And I think they will. I'll say Nebraska 20, Oklahoma 17."

John Brooks, "Voice of the Sooners," Oklahoma City: "It seems that the last two weeks have made Oklahoma's season come back alive, and with the Sooners as healthy as they are now and the offensive line obviously playing at its best, I think the Sooners are a legitimate toss-up in the game. It will go down to three or four key plays. Oklahoma 17, Nebraska, 13."

THE WAY WE SEE IT

Huskers Illustrated: "I guess I'm back by popular demand. Last week, I happened to project a 41-7 Nebraska win over Kansas and nobody wants me to retire by hitting one on the nose. Skeptics insist my 41-point total for Nebraska was based on five touchdowns and two field goals. I insist I knew the wind would be bad and the Huskers would miss an extra point. Enough frivolity. Nebraska-Oklahoma is serious business. If it hadn't been for Kansas, this might be the most important game in college football in 13 years. Does anyone doubt the Huskers and Sooners would be ranked 1-2, if it weren't for those Jayhawks? Shootout in Lincoln may not have the same stakes as Shootout I in Norman. But they're still big and they're still exciting. Thirteen years ago, the offenses exploded. This year, the defenses will shut everything down. Nebraska 13, Oklahoma 10."
